

Managed Intelligence

Trusted Leaders in Intelligence Services

Security teams of all disciplines are responsible for protecting infrastructure, employees, consumers and sensitive information. However, it is a struggle to keep up with the evolving landscape due to limited resources, time, and bandwidth, combined with a complex and increasingly sophisticated threat landscape.

Ransomware, extortion attempts, physical threats against executives, and fraud necessitate that organizations overcome these challenges to stop and mitigate costly threats and protect the enterprise.

Organizations recognizing these threats and seeking to augment or outsource aspects of their security teams require a trusted partner who understands the customer's needs as well as the entire threat landscape. They require the most advanced technology to help rapidly detect threats, insight into the illicit communities where threat actor activity originates, and support from industry-leading professionals in order to fully understand their exposure, respond to threats, and take action to mitigate risk.

Flashpoint augments your security team's productivity by more than $275k per year while reducing data breach costs, fraud losses, and response time on false positives, leading to hundreds of thousands more in savings.
